1. To pare off with a razor.

He that is to be cleansed shall shave off all his hair. Levit.
 Zelim was the first of the Ottomans that did shave his beard: a bashaw ask'd why he alter'd the custom of his predecessors? He answered, because your bashaws may not lead me by the beard, as you did them. Bacon.

Dost thou not know this shaven pate? Truly it is a great man's head. Knolles's Hist. of the Turks.

I caud the hair of his head to be shaved off. Wise man.

2. To pare close to the surface.

Sweet bird!
 These chauntres, oft the woods among,
 I woo to hear the evening song:
 And missing thee, I walk unseen
 On the dry smooth shaven green.

The bending scythe

Shaves all the surface of the waving green. Gay.

3. To skim by passing near, or slightly touching.

He shaves with level wing the deep; then soars

Up to the fiery concave tow'ring high. Milton.

or shaven in leaf or root. Bacon.

5. To strip; to oppress by extortion; to pillage.

SHAVELING. n. f. [from shave.] A man shaved; a friar, or religious. Used in contempt.

Of elves, there be no such things; only by bald friars and knave shavelings to be feigned. Spenser.

SHAVEN. n. f. [from shave.]

1. A man that practices the art of shaving.

2. A man closely attentive to his own interest.

My lord

Was now dispos'd to crack a jest,

And bid friend Lewis go in quest;

This Lewis is a cunning shaver. Swift.

3. A robber; a plunderer.

They fell all into the hands of the cruel mountain people, living for the most part by theft, and waiting for wrecks, as hawks for their prey: by these shavers the Turks were stript of all they had. Knolles.

SHAVING. n. f. [from shave.] Any thin slice pared off from any body.

Take lignum aloes in gross shavings, steep them in sack, changed twice, till the bitterness be drawn forth; then take the shavings forth and dry them in the shade, and beat them to powder. Bacon.

By electric bodies I do not conceive only such as take up shavings, straws, and light bodies, but such as attract all bodies palpable whatsoever. Brown's Vulgar Errors.

The shavings are good for the fining of wine. Mart.

she, old English.]

1. The female pronoun demonstrative: the woman; the woman before mentioned.

She, of whom the ancients seem'd to prophesy,

When they call'd virtues by the name of she;

She, in whom virtue was so much refin'd,

That for allay unto so pure a mind

She took the weaker sex. Donne.

This once disclos'd,

The ladies did change favours, and then we

Following the signs, wood'd but the sign of she. Shakesp.

What, at any time, have you heard her say?

The most upright of mortal men was he;

The most sincere, and holy woman, she. Dryden.

2. It is sometimes used for a woman absolutely, with some degree of contempt.

The she of Italy shall not betray

My interest, and his honour. Shakesp.'s Cymbeline.

Lady, you are the cruellest she alive,

If you will lead these graces to the grave,

And leave the world no copy. Shakesp.'s Twelfth Night.

SHE

I was wont

To load my she with knacks, I wou'd have ranack'd

The pedlar's silken treasury, and have pour'd it

To her acceptance. Shakesp.'s Winter's Tale.

3. The female; not the male.

I would outface the sternest eyes that look,

Pluck the young sucking cubs from the she bear

To win thee, lady. Shakesp. Merchant of Venice.

Let us do it with no shew of fear;

No, with no more, than if we heard that England

Were busied with a Whitson morris-dance;

For my good liege, she is so idly king'd,

That fear attends her not. Shakesp. Hen. V.

The nightingale, if she would sing by day,

When every goose is cackling, wou'd be thought

No better a musician than the wren. Shakesp.

He lions are hirsute, and have great manes, the she are smooth like cats. Bacon.

Stand it in Judah's chronicles confest,

That David's son, by impious passion mov'd,

Smote a she-slave, and murder'd what he lov'd. Prior.

SHEAF. n. f. sheaves plural. [reap, Saxon; schaf, Dutch.]

1. A bundle of stalks of corn bound together, that the ears may dry.

These be the sheaves that honour's harvest bears,

The seed thy valiant acts, the world the field. Fairfax.

He beheld a field,

Part arable and tith; whereon were sheaves

New-reap'd: the other part sheep-walks and folds. Milt.

The reaper fills his greedy hands,

And binds the golden sheaves in brittle bands. Dryden.

I pitch'd the sheaves (oh could I do so now)

Which she in rows pil'd. Gay's Fagstaff.

2. Any bundle or collection held together.

She vanish'd;

The sheaf of arrows shook and rattled in the case. Dryden.

In the knowledge of bodies, we must glean what we can;

since we cannot, from a discovery of their real essences, grasp at a time whole sheaves; and in bundles comprehend the nature of whole species. Locke.

TO SHEAL. v. a. To shell. See SHALE.

Thou art a shealed peacock. Shakesp. K. Lear.

TO SHEAR. preter. shore, or sheared; part. pass. shorn. [reap, Saxon; scyren, Saxon.]

1. To clip or cut by interception between two blades moving on a rivet.

So many days, my ewe have been with young;

So many weeks, e're the poor fools will yean;

So many months, e're I shall shear the fleece. Shakesp.

I am shepherd to another man,

And do not shear the fleeces that I graze. Shakesp.

Laban went to shear his sheep. Gen. xxxi. 19.

When wool is new shorn, they set pails of water by in the fame room to increase its weight. Bacon's Nat. Hist.

Of all my strength, in the lascivious lap

Of a deceitful concubine, who shore me,

Like a tame weather, all my precious fleece. Milton.

The fame ill taste of sense wou'd serve to join

Dog foxes in the yolk, and shear the swine. Dryden.

May'st thou henceforth sweetly sleep,

Shear, swains, oh shear your softest sheep

To swell his couch. Gay.

O'er the congenial dust injoin'd to shear

The graceful curl, and drop the tender tear. Pope.

2. To cut.

The sharp and toothed edge of the nether chap strikes into a canal cut into the bone of the upper; and the toothed protuberance of the upper into a canal in the nether: by which means he easily shears the grafs whereon he feeds. Grew.

SHEAR. n. f. [from the verb. It is seldom used in the

SHEARS. } singular, but is found once in Dryden.]

1. An instrument to cut, consisting of two blades moving on a pin, between which the thing cut is intercepted. Shears are large, and scissors a smaller instrument of the same kind.

Alas, thought Philocteta to herself, your shears come too late to clip the bird's wings that already is flown away. Siddons.

Why do you bend such solemn brows on me?

Think you I bear the shears of destiny?

Have I commandment on the pulse of life? Shakesp.

The fates prepar'd their sharpen'd shears. Dryden.

When the fleece is shorn,

Then their defenceless limbs the brambles tear;

Short of their wool, and naked from the shear. Dryden.

That people live and die, I knew,

An hour ago, as well as you;

And if fate spins us longer years,

Or is in haste to take the shears,

I know, we must both fortunes try,

And bear our evils, wet or dry. Prior.

How happy should we be if we had the privilege of employing the shears for want of a mint, upon foreign gold, by clipping it into half crowns. Swift.

Fate urg'd the shears and cut the sylph in twain,

But airy subdance soon unites again. Pope.

Beneath the shears they felt no lasting smart,

They lost but fleeces, while I lost a heart. Gay.

2. The denomination of the age of sheep.

When sheep is one shear, they will have two broad teeth before; when two shear, four; when three, six; when four, eight; and after that, their mouths break. Mortimer.

3. Any thing in the form of the blades of shears.

Wings, in shear. Spenser.
